Take typhoon readiness measures

by Cpl. Ryan O'Hare
Torii Teller Staff

Typhoon season has approached, and station residents can take safety precautions in case of a natural disaster.

Before a typhoon hits, the American Red Cross and Family Housing offices can offer assistance and information to help residents weather the storm.

"We offer brochures and classes that can help residents prepare for a natural disaster," said Cynthia Childers, American Red Cross field office coordinator. "It is important that people know ahead of time how to prepare for the worst."

The safety brochures give information such as preparing a survival kit, non-perishable foods, sufficient water supply, and emergency tools.

The Red Cross also offers cardiopulmonary resuscitation certification and basic first aid, both of which are strongly suggested by Red Cross staff.

"It's very important that people know how to give first aid," said Childers. "If a disaster strikes and you are prepared, you can save the

Putting hazardous waste in its proper place

by Melissa Hunter
Red Cross Volunteer

Station dumpsters are intended for combustibles and non-combustibles, but hazardous materials continue to show up.

Improper disposal of household chemicals can cause water pollution as well as generate toxic fumes, according to Environmental Division personnel.

"Chemicals left in dumpsters can cause environmental problems, but they are mainly a danger for children who might find it," said Mike Farkas, hazardous waste manager.

The Hazardous Minimization Center here helps reduce hazardous waste and save money.

"Needed chemicals can be checked out and reusable portions can be returned for others to use," said Chief Petty Officer Robert Bugawan, HAZMIN Center division chief.

"It's a win-win situation," said Farkas. "You can check out a can of paint, and what's left over can be returned instead of becoming dangerous waste."

Household materials can be turned in to the center and checked out by anyone in the community. However, only authorized personnel can check out other hazardous materials. Vehicle oils and other fuels should be turned into the Auto Hobby Shop, said Bugawan.

Residents should not mix any chemicals into one container for turn-in, and labels should be left on containers for proper identification.

For additional information concerning waste disposal call the HAZMIN Center at 253-3706.

Who are you calling momma's boy?

by Sgt. Michael Wiener
Torii Teller Staff

Most guys credit their toughness to hardships, barroom brawls and other overly exaggerated truths. Not me.

I owe my cold-hearted, stiff upper lip, hard-as-nails character all to Mom. For some reason, my mother never had much sympathy for me when I was seriously injured. She planted the "suck it up and march" seed in me long before I joined the Marine Corps.

At the tender age of 13, I went to a friend's birthday party. There were about 10 other hooligans at the shindig, and soon our mischievous minds were at work.

To make a long story short, we ended up being chased through a cornfield by a psychotic neighbor in his 4x4 Bronco. Lucky for us, the neighbor's driving was as bad as his idea to run us all down – everyone escaped unscathed, except for one poor youngster – me.

AND BAD NEWS

... I HAVE A "NEW

During the chase, I managed to run into a barbed-wire fence. I saw it just before we met and was fortunate to turn my back into it instead of taking it head on. The encounter left me with a 14-inch gash across my back.

To add insult to injury, I tripped over a fallen barbed-wire fence as I ran back to my friend's house. Not only was my shirt a bloody mess, but my new boat shoes were soaking up blood as well. The scar count was on the rise.

Because of the adrenaline, I didn't even realize I was bleeding like a hemophiliac. I walked up to my friend's house leaving behind a trail of red ooze.

Almost everyone had made it out of the "killing fields." The psychotic driver was talking with my friend's mother and the sheriff. When she saw me walk up, her jaw hit the driveway.

Within minutes, my fellow instigators surrounded me, seemingly impressed by the gaping wounds and bloody mess. My friend's mom wasn't so impressed – she was having other thoughts.

I could see the fear in her eyes as she drove me home, trying to figure out how she was going to explain to Mom what had happened to her little boy.

"Don't worry. Things like this happen to me all the time," I said, trying to comfort her. It didn't help much.

When I walked into my home, closely followed by my friend's mom, my loving, caring, kind-

G-8 press gets a look at real Marine Corps

by Gunnery Sgt. M.A. Zeid
USMC Reserves

OKINAWA, Japan — Thousands of media representatives came here for the G-8 Summit July 21-23. During their visit, almost 200 of them took advantage of a special, week-long media event July 17-22 that provided special tours at Camp Schwab and at Marine Corps Air Station Futenma to find out more about the Marine Corps and to meet some of the Marines stationed here.

The tours began with a presentation by Col. David P. Rann, assistant Chief of Staff for Marine Corps Bases Japan. In the briefing, Rann explained the importance of U.S. forces on Okinawa and the U.S.-Japan Security Treaty. He pointed out how these forces brought security and stability to Asia, since the III Marine Expeditionary Force is the only permanently forward deployed ground force in the area, as well as the Marine Corps.

Rann highlighted Okinawa's strategic position. "If the Okinawa Marines and their equipment were Marine Corps Community Services Aquatics Director Sean KimHan held an art contest Feb. 1 to March 31 in order to determine who would paint the walls of the indoor "kiddy pool."

"I was hoping a lot of young children would submit artwork," said KimHan. "My plan was to have the contest yearly so that starting with the year 2000 we could line paintings along the wall through time."

When March 31 rolled around KimHan realized his plan wasn't going to work the way he hoped.

"The deadline came, and only two people had submitted art. I knew I couldn't do the contest yearly with such a low turnout."

Although only two paintings came in, KimHan feels the contest was not held in vain.

"One of the paintings was amazing. It reminded me of my home in Hawaii. The painting looked so well that I asked the artist to paint the whole wall."

The artist, Kelly Mattes, was more than happy to do just that. "I'm an artist, that's what I do for a living," said Mattes. "I have done a couple murals before, they're fun to do."

Mattes said he got the idea for the Mural after taking a picture at the zoo.

"I took a picture of my wife and child standing in front of an elephant," said Mattes. "I stood way back and cropped the picture in tight so all that could be seen behind my family was a big elephant face."

"I wanted to create the same effect in the mural, so I added a big whale into the background among little dolphins," he said.

Because he enjoys painting so much, Mattes said he wouldn't mind coloring the air station with a few more murals.

"I would like to paint some murals of safari animals like hippos or lions," he said.

KimHan says the mural helps make the air station a better place to live.

"We want to promote family unity in a place that is relaxing and stress free; the beautiful mural aids in doing that," KimHan said.

hearted mother exclaimed, "Oh no. What did you do now?"

As I recounted the tale of terror and showed her my near-fatal wound, she laughed.

Let me say it again – she laughed. She told my friend's mom not to worry, and that indeed, these things happened to me all the time.

When I asked about stitches, she assured me the laceration would heal without scarring. Last time I checked, however, there is still a large scar running across my back. Apparently, I had already made my trip to the emergency room that week.

Abrasions, lacerations and contusions continued throughout my school years. I was such a regular in the emergency room, the staff bought me a customized gurney. Mom? She never shed a tear on my behalf.

I've never berated my mother's no-tears attitude. In fact, it has really helped me in recent years. From terrifying drill instructors, to blood-thirsty platoon sergeants, to countless miles of hiking, I've always sucked it up.

I am one of the toughest Marines in the Corps, and I owe it all to Mom.

based in the United States," he explained, "more than 5,000 aircraft flights would be required to move them to the Pacific Theater."

Rann also explained how hard the Marine Corps works on being good neighbors, as well as allies. He explained the programs designed to help protect the environment, the community action programs and the Liberty Campaign Plan.

After the briefing, the reporters visited a special display of equipment used by various units on Okinawa. The press had the opportunity to closely examine the equipment and ask questions about it. They also met and interviewed some Marines on the island.

Ayaka Shimada from Fuji TV Japan was one of the first reporters to tour the display and meet the Marines. "I think it's a good opportunity for the press to get to know more about the Marines," said Shimada, who also commented how useful the hands-on experience was.

Reuter's reporter Jon Herskovitz agreed.

"At a time when so many reporters have covered Okinawa in terms of the U.S.-Japan bilateral relationship and are coming for the G-8 Summit, it's a good thing to show them the bases so they can actually see what they have been writing about," stated Herskovitz.

Marines welcomed the chance to showcase their special skills and their equipment.

"I think it's a really good opportunity for the Japanese to come see what the Marine Corps is all about and why we are here," said 26-year-old Sgt. Glenn E. Singer, a Light Armored Vehicle driver from C Company, Light Armored Reconnaissance Battalion, currently attached to Combat Assault battalion, 3rd Marine Division. "I think it's a good opportunity for the Japanese media to find out more about the Marine Corps' mission here," he said.

Corporal Jason B. Carnahan, from the 1st Stinger Battery, Marine Air Control Group-18, echoed those ideas. "It gives the press the opportunity to see what the Marine Corps has and uses for protecting Okinawa," said Carnahan.

The week ended with a special tour to the Jungle Warfare Training Center July 22. More than 30 media reporters watched Marines practice jungle warfare tactics using the chalk marking rounds from Special Effects Small Arms Marking System and had the chance to join them in rappelling off a cliff. They finished the tour by chowing down on a Meal, Ready-to-Eat and taking a helicopter ride.

"It was exceptional, especially the Marines in the field," said Rann. "It gave us a chance to touch the rest of the world with what our Marines are doing here."

MALS-12 Marine earns award

by Cpl. Kurt Fredrickson

Torii Teller Staff

Each year the Marine Corps Aviation Association awards one Marine the Ken W. Southcomb Aviation Supply Marine of the Year Award for outstanding performance in their job field.

This year that honor went to Staff Sgt. Alan Papke, MALS-12 Repairable Control Branch noncommissioned officer-in-charge. He received the award for managing inventory consisting of over 2,600 items valued at more than $264 million.

What earned Papke the award was not just recent work, but a career full of experience.

Papke began his Marine Corps career in supply more than 17 years ago.

After boot camp at Marine Corps Recruit Depot San Diego he was transferred to Naval Air Station Meridian, Miss., for his formal training as a basic aviation supply clerk.

Private First Class Papke's first assignment was to NAS New Orleans, La. While there, then Lance Cpl. Papke, received a meritorious promotion to Corporal for devotion to duty, superior knowledge, appearance and professionalism. The traits and values that earned Papke a meritorious promotion have stayed with him and have now earned him an award.

"After all the years of performing my job and completing the mission, I never expected to win an award," Papke said.

Papke did not know about the award until he was told about being nominated. According to Papke, his concern was never with winning an award, but instead with coming to work and giving 110 percent every day like Marines do.

After his nomination was submitted, Papke forgot about the award and went back to work. It came as a surprise when he found out he had won.

"I got the phone call at seven in the morning," Papke said. "I didn't believe it."

"The award speaks for itself. He's the best supply guy of the year," said Gunnery Sgt. Mark Obey, MALS-12 Repairable Management Division non-commissioned officer-in-charge. "People go to him when they need the answers."

While in Iwakuni he reduced the delivery times for high priority repairable parts from more than one hour to a weekly average of 26 minutes, which helped MAG-12 enjoy a 91.2 percent mission capable rate during February 2000.

"We make sure the gear is there for the airplanes so they can fly," Papke said. "They can fix them, but we give them the parts."

The award banquet for all the winners will be held in Washington, D.C. Winners of MCAA awards will be flown to the ceremony with a guest for a four-day stay in the nation's capital.

Aside from receiving the award, Papke said he is excited to see some of the famous sights. He has never been to the Washington, D.C. and wants to see as much as he can.

As for the award, Papke said, "I'm honored and privileged to receive it."

lives of your loved ones."

When contact with a typhoon is inevitable, preparations must be taken to ensure safety. Some considerations include bringing all lawn furniture and pets indoors, and strapping down anything that can not be taken inside during the storm.

Family Housing inspectors are sent out to ensure there are no loose objects that could be hazardous in high winds.

"Our inspectors do several checks through the housing areas," said Sally Gilmour, housing manager. "We're just trying to ensure that everyone is safe."

It is also suggested that anyone leaving the station inform the housing office of their absence. This ensures that safety precautions will be made to the vacant house in case of an emergency.

During an event such as a typhoon, residents can tune in to American Forces Network (1575 AM, AFN Pacific, Channel 66 or 11) to keep updated on conditions and command information.

By preparing for disaster safety early, Iwakuni residents can increase their safety over the summer.

For more information call the American Red Cross at 253-4525.

offers chance to set sail

Now that summer time has arrived, the opportunity to set sail and enjoy the water is available to Iwakuni residents.

"Sailing is a great outdoor activity. I encourage everyone to come out here and learn how to do it," said Scott Edwards, Outdoor Recreation director. "It's a great way to spend the day outside in the sun, and the whole family can participate in the activity. It's good to see people getting outdoors and learning something new and developing their skills."

Status of Forces Agreement personnel have the opportunity to get out on the water and sail the afternoon away by attending the sailing course offered through Outdoor Recreation.

Edwards teaches U.S. Association level-one sailing classes every other week at the station marina for a nominal fee. The certification is valid for sailing anywhere in the United States and any military base overseas.

"The classes are both exciting and leisurely at the same time," said Gunnery Sgt. Jay White, American Forces Network operations supervisor. "It's been a great experience learning how to sail, and it's something my family enjoys to do as well."

Each class is broken down into five, four-hour sessions. The basics of rigging, tacking, and wind direction are just a few of the topics covered throughout the course. Students are also taught the proper safety procedures in case their boat capsizes.

"Safety is our main concern," said Edwards. "We want the students to be able to react to any situation that may arise out on the water."

The students learn the fundamentals of sailing on "American 14.6" sailboats. According to Edwards, these boats are perfect for beginners as well as seasoned sailors alike. Four sailboats are available for free checkout by SOFA personnel within the marina limits.

"One of the great things about sailing is I'm able to choose the conditions I want to sail in," White said. "I can come out here on a windy day and really slice through the water or choose a light day to read a book and enjoy the sun. I strongly recommend the class to anyone who enjoys the water."

For more information about sailing classes, call Outdoor Recreation at 253-3822.

Rated PG-13 for sci-fi action violence.
Adapted from the most popular Marvel comics of the 1990s, the X-Men are a group of genetic mutants with amazing abilities, brought together and trained by the world's most powerful telepath, Professor Charles Xavier (Patrick Stewart) to help fight for his dream — a world where the mutant minority and human majority can live together in harmony — to be judged not by the fancy powers they possess, but by the content of their character. However, the Mutant Master of Magnetism, Magneto (Ian McKellen), scarred by the human brutality he's amassed a brotherhood of like-minded mutants to help achieve his goals by any means necessary. With anti-mutant sentiment prevailing at every turn, the X-Men strive to protect the very humans that fear and hate them.

Gone In Sixty Seconds (PG-13)
Rated PG-13 for violence, sexuality and language.
Gone in Sixty Seconds is about a car thief of legendary proportion. No fancy lock or alarm could stop him; your car would be there, and then gone in 60 seconds. For years, he eluded the law while boosting every make and model imaginable. When the heat became too intense, he abandoned his life of crime and left everything and everyone he loved to find a different life. Now, when his kid brother tries to follow in his footsteps, only to become embroiled in a high stakes caper, Memphis is sucked back into his ways — to save his brother's life.

Sabrina the Teenage Witch (PG)
Based on a character from the "Archie Comics," this live-action comic adventure follows the exploits of a 16-year-old girl who, after moving in with her two batty aunts and starting at a new school, discovers she's a witch.

This schedule is submitted by the Sakura Theater and is subject to change.

Blotter

The following excerpts are taken from the Blotter:

A Marine NCO reported he observed unknown persons break the door window of an office and lounge area. When Military Police entered the office, the individuals had fled the scene.

A Marine NCO observed a junior Marine laying in an alley being assisted by a NCO. Upon investigation, Military Police found that the NCO was intoxicated and fell when the NCO and junior Marine had been wrestling and the junior Marine struck the NCO. The NCO sustained a laceration above his right eye and was released by medical.

A Marine officer and Sailor were involved in a verbal altercation which escalated into a physical confrontation. The Marine struck the Sailor in the mouth, causing injury to the Sailor's upper lip.

Hit Squad devours SE Tuggers 64-40

by Sgt. Michael Wiener
Torii Teller Staff

The Hit Squad ended their season on a high note Monday, sending the SE Tuggers to a disappointing 64-40 loss in intramural basketball action at the Main Gym.

Running the ball and using the fast break was key to Hit Squad's dominance of the game, said coach Michael Cosby.

"When we were thinking about what we were doing, we were successful," he said.

Keeping the tempo of the game up, Hit Squad jumped out to a 6-0 lead and never let it go. Jerry Bringley, Hit Squad shooting guard, led the charge for Hit Squad and finished the game with 18 points, 12 of which came in the second half.

After trailing by as much as 13 points, the Tuggers managed to get back within five before the half ended. The Tuggers slowed the pace and got much needed relief with three three-pointers off the hot hand of Atonda Livingston.

"He's an outstanding shooter," said teammate Andre Corley who had nine points for the night. "We just kept feeding him the ball."

In the second half, however, Hit Squad picked up the pace again and buried the Tuggers.

Bringley put an exclamation point on the win by dropping a three-pointer four feet off the arc as the horn sounded the end of the game.

Though happy with the win, Cosby wants to step up their game for the upcoming intramural championship tournament.

"If we play like we did tonight, we won't go far," he said. "It was a good win, but we can play better. We just have to think more about what we're doing with the ball."

On the flipside, the Tuggers believe they can turn it around in the playoffs.

"It's going to be a different story. The tables turn real quick when it comes to the tournament," Corely said. "We've got guys who've been there before and know how to handle the pressure."

In other Monday night action, the CSSD-36 Dragons closed down shop for H&HS Admin, sending them to a 69-40 loss. Crash Crew edged out PSD Bushidos 51-50 in the final game of the night.
